Executive Summary

- In today's volatile macroeconomic climate, organizations face unprecedented challenges with talent retention, as high inflation steadily erodes the real value of executive compensation and drives the ongoing emigration wave (Japa) among senior professionals. For corporations, constantly replacing top-tier talent is a severe operational drain, making it critical to deploy high-impact welfare benefits that serve as incentive without adding capital liabilities to the company's balance sheet

- Mixta Africa is a leading urban infrastructure and real estate developer for Africa's rapidly growing population, with an expansive land bank measuring 15million square meters and project experience in 8 countries and operations in over 5 countries.
